BIOGRAPHY

John Vaught represents the nation's leading insurers in complex insurance defense, including class actions, securities fraud class actions, corporate governance issues, liability and director and officer insurance disputes, trade secrets, intellectual property, commercial, and antitrust matters. John has successfully defeated motions for class certification (other than settlement classes) in dozens of major class actions he has handled involving insurance, securities fraud, and consumer products.

In addition, John has substantial litigation, mediation, and trial experience in the federal courts and in Colorado and Missouri involving complex commercial litigation, including the defense of class action litigation. His appellate experience includes the Tenth Circuit and the Colorado Supreme Court, as well as courts of appeals in Colorado and Missouri.

An AAA-trained mediator, John brings his extensive experience to bear for clients seeking to resolve complex disputes out of court. John has represented sophisticated clients in approximately 80 mediations over his career. Based on his broad experience, John understands that a mediator's attention to case details and appreciation of litigants' goals dramatically affects the process and likelihood of achieving resolution, and he brings this perspective to his role as a mediator.

John is President Elect of the Colorado Bar Association. He will begin his term as President in 2018.
